The performance of nonprofit organizations is measured in a variety of ways. One such way is the consideration of how the organization spends its funds. CharityWatch rates charities on numerous factors including the portion of total expenses spent on charitable programs. CharityWatch considers 60% of total functional expenses spent on programs to be reasonable for most charities. However, in its opinion, the most highly efficient charities spend 75% or more of their functional expenses on programs.

Based on information from your latest audited financial statements, your organization spent $1,723,721 (78%) of total expenses on programs for 2012.

Another performance measure used by CharityWatch to rate charities is fundraising efficiency. Fundraising efficiency reflects how much an organization spends to raise $100. CharityWatch considers $35 or less to raise $100 to be reasonable for most charities. Based on information from your latest audited financial statements, your organization spent $18 in 2012 to raise $100.

We hope you find this information useful in evaluating the effectiveness of your organization in relation to other nonprofit organizations. Feel free to contact me should you need further assistance.

Sincerely,

Bob Weatherly, CPA
Partner
